

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am a user of 100% bio-diesel when I can obtain it. It is of great concern that with the introduction of the "SETTING NATIONAL FUEL QUALITY STANDARDS" paper that I will no longer be able to help the environment with my choice of renewable fuels and also rid the environment of another waste in used oils and fats that would otherwise go into land fill.

I would like to continue to buy from and support this industry while it is still relatively young. I feel that supporting the bio-diesel industry I am supporting the environment even more than the ethanol effort, in that no extra food stuffs have to be produced to support this operation.

I would like the government to reconsider its options with this bill and give the public more time to consider what a marvellous opportunity it has under present regulations.

Yours
