- Mead, T. (1961). Killers of Eden. The story of the killer whales of Twofold Bay. The killer pack returned every winter from at least the 1840s to the late 1920s. Many of the killers were individually recognisable chiefly by the shape of their dorsal fins and were given names by the whalers. The doings of these killers are a remarkable animal story that should be better known. It is suggested, however. that Mead's book is not the one to read about them. The story is told in a very long-winded style and the book is largely made up of phoney conversation of the whalers and other citizens of Eden. Except for the final scenes it is not apparent what time in history the story takes place. One favourable feature of the book is that it publishes some very interesting old photographs. One can still not do better than to read about the killers of Eden in W.J. Dakin's excellent book Whalemen adventurers. Angus & Robertson Ltd. : Sydney. 1st edn 1934, 2nd edn revised 1938). Whales
